English CV

My name is Ludovico Crisanti Cucchiella and I was born the 3rd of May, 1993 in Rome.

I was very young when I first took in my hands the book “La Rabbia e L’orgoglio”, “The Rage and the Pride” by Oriana Fallaci. When I finished it I felt very conflicted. On some things I agreed on, on other things I disagreed. And yet I felt a growing admiration for a journalist who had written things with competence, sentiment, and perspective. Her voice was so different from the voice of the articles I read on the internet. My passion for journalism fortifies and is fortified by my passion for fiction. I loved those stories animated by those majestic feelings of compassion, love and unity that we rarely follow in the real world. So I wrote my first novel “Emery’s Symphony” that was published in 2017 by the publishing house GANGEMI.

I grew up in Rome’s Marymount International school and graduated at the American Overseas School of Rome. It’s thanks to these two wonderful schools that English is my first language. I studied Economics and Business at LUISS university in Rome. After I obtained my Economics and Business degree I moved to Barcelona and Paris for several months to study Spanish and French. I obtained the official B2 French DELF certificate and the C1 Spanish DELE certificate which allow me to work in both countries. After that I studied at John Cabot University and the American University of Rome, for two summer semesters, during which I attended and passed college level Creative writing, Poetry and Public speaking courses. In 2021 I worked for several months at INTEC SPA and APER SRL, two companies who work, respectively in the infrastructure and agricultural sector, for which I developed brochures and helped carry out due diligences.
